For "country" kids West Point School was a school built in the Brownsburg area for the "country" kids.

A school of yesteryear The original College Avenue School has been torn down and replaced with a newer building.

Look What We Came From

Take a good look. Take a good look back in time to a one-room school-house filled with students of all ages. Imagine, if you will, for one moment a group of students marching to the beat of a drum and a piano playing while they carried their desks above their heads. According to Mr. Floyd Hufford, class of 1927, "Twenty-five to thirty students moved their supplies from the original high school to the new building." This actually happened in 1919 when the new high school was built and the original torn down, and given to the elementary school. At the same time some people thought only city students should go to the high school. As a result, the country students went to West Point which was out on 136 West beyond the covered bridge where the Burns' house is now located. The school system began with the schools of Sambo, Sixty Cents, and Brown Township, to name a few. In these schools many children from different areas and of different ages were educated. They came by the school hack, a wooden "buggy" with a canvas top, pulled by two horses. As each old school gave way to a new school, it was evident that education was a top priority through the changes of the time.

A school of many grades Now Lincoln Elementary, this building was the high school and has also been an intermediate school.

A new addition The College Avenue Gym was built as an addition to the old College Avenue School.

Look, Where We're Going

Take a good look. Glance inside the doors of the school. Get a glimpse of the real Brownsburg High School. We're more than just students putting in five days a week for twelve years in order to graduate. We're people working together to learn and grow. We're administrators guiding and also correcting if needed. We're counselors helping students make sense of educational goals and sort out a variety of conflicting emotions and desires. We're support personnel providing the best atmosphere possible for maximum achievement. We're teachers sharing knowledge and experience to challenge and to dare.

And we're young men and women, emerging from childhood to take our places among the leaders of tomorrow.

Take a closer look. We're artists creating beauty in pictures and sound. We're athletes pushing ourselves to the very limit of endurance. We're scientists discovering the inner workings of the universe. We're writers expressing our innermost feelings and weaving stories of mystery and intrigue. We're hundreds of individuals, each with a contribution to make. We are Brownsburg High School.

Very contemporary The new staircase is only a portion of the new wing painted in bright, modern colors.

A new form of communication A moving marquee is added in the main hallway and displays announcements.

Will it get finished? This question was asked by everyone when the new wing was unfinished only weeks before school started.

Huh? Mr. Godan gives a quizzical look as he asks Mrs. Leamon a question.

Will it ever be done? Mrs. Leamon works diligently on her many piles of paperwork.

How are things working? Mrs. Leamon checks on junior Joe Manning as he completes a career survey in the guidance office.

Take an admiring look. Take a look at who's around you. Dedicated people like Mrs. Leamon. Mrs. Leamon has chosen to work with students here at BHS because she enjoys working with children and teens. She has brought to Brownsburg much experience that was acquired at other school systems in Indiana and Arizona. Mrs. Leamon is the guidance secretary and her duties include gathering schedules, printing report cards, preparing transcripts of grades, and, in general, helping the faculty and students.

Born Barbara Jan Ramsey in Tippecanoe county, Mrs. Leamon grew up with her parents, her brother, and her sister in Stockwell, Indiana. She attended school there and graduated from Stockwell High School in 1955. She then married Lloyd Leamon a year later and now has two daughters, Kathryn Burkett and Karen Leamon, and two grandchildren.

Mrs. Leamon now resides in Brownsburg, but she has also lived in California, Illinois, and Arizona. Her hobbies include participating in church activities, playing the piano, and reading. She also enjoys traveling and has visited Greece, England, Scotland, Bermuda, and various places in the United States.

Mrs. Leamon's smile and charm are greatly admired by everyone. According to Mrs. Leamon's daughters, "she has always been a terrific wife, mother, and friend." Because of this special quality and her kindness, we, the 1987-88 Tempo Staff, dedicate the yearbook to her.

This is how it's done Mrs. Leamon and Mrs. Bengel work together on the computer.

Looking Beyond

Take a closer look. Take a closer look at ten very special seniors who have shown the qualities of intelligence, leadership, involvement, dedication, and friendliness. These students were model students who had been nominated by their classmates and elected by the faculty here at BHS to be included as a Top Ten Senior. This very special honor included students who have participated in activities ranging from sports to student council to the performing arts. Six of the ten students were some type of club officer and half of these seniors were in student council. Five of the ten seniors ranked in the top tenth of their graduating class academically. Each of these ten students was very active in extra-curricular activities and, therefore, earned the respect of their peers and the faculty here at BHS. Because of the very admirable qualities displayed by these seniors, they were honored with the award of being named a Top Ten Senior.

Take a broad look at the diverse cultures — the diverse cultures displayed at the 1987 Pan American Games. The Pan Am Games were held in Indianapolis this past August and included sports ranging from boxing to running to ping pong. They not only promoted the city's growth, but also allowed students and faculty at BHS to expand their knowledge of foreign countries. Many of the student body contributed to the Games by volunteering their time and effort into escorting athletes, translating conversations, blowing up balloons, cleaning stadiums, and being spectators, fans, and loyal supporters. The Games gave people at BHS the opportunity to meet men and women from different nations and to learn a little bit about the Western hemisphere. The Games taught us the meaning of friendly competition. According to Mrs. Carla Larsh, "(The Pan Am Games) increased the community's awareness that there is another culture, different from our own."

Looking Beyond The Here

Robin Virgil

Sharon Gibson

Take a look around the world. Taking a look at foreign ideas and customs was easy at BHS because of the foreign exchange students attending the school and the foreign exchange students visiting Brownsburg over the summer. These students give the opportunity to learn about other countries and make new friends. Jennifer West, junior, said this about the Spanish exchange student which she hosted over the summer, "Having a foreign exchange student over the summer taught our family some of the very different customs the Spanish foreigners have. Our lives changed by watching the way we spoke our English in order for her to understand and learn from us." Some BHS students were also lucky enough to be exchange students and visit other countries. Senior Laura Bellville, on the IU Honors Program, stayed in Germany over the summer. These traveling opportunities and exchange students allowed BHS students and faculty a chance to learn about the world.

Kick! Senior Erik Norrman from Sweden who lives with the Eubank family has control of the ball in a home soccer game.

Say cheese! Senior Jesper Rosenloev from Denmark is staying with the Walls family.

The Goals And Tasks Fulfilled, Take A Look What We've Done

New principals, new teachers, and new students. Each year there were several new faces added to BHS, but the most popular new face this year was the principal, Mr. Jim Land. Mr. Land, who was originally from Noblesville, graduated from Ball State University with a major in Industrial Arts. When Mr. Land was asked what he thought of Brownsburg he replied, "I don't know why anyone would live anywhere else." He also said that "Brownsburg H.S. is much more academically oriented (than the school he was principal of before) and there is a great deal more parent and community support." Mr. Land seemed to have adapted to life at BHS very well and he plans to be here for many years to come. Another new face this year was Bill Jensen. Mr. Jensen came to BHS early in the year when Mr. Heck resigned to go work with former principal Jim Ellsberry. With all of the new faces in the main office, it was nice to see a couple of old, familiar faces. Don Bauchert kept his position as Athletic Director and was in charge of preparing schedules for each sport, ordering new team equipment, and in general, keeping everything running smoothly in the athletic department. Assistant principal Jim Acton was once again in charge of the newly remodeled attendance office. He was also given the honor of being Grand Marshall of the 1987 Homecoming. The combination of new ideas and old traditions created a nice atmosphere for learning and education at BHS.

The Look That Helps Us Plan Our Future

Scheduling classes, planning college days, finding scholarships, organizing the career decision-making system, and counseling students are just a few things the guidance department is responsible for each year. Last spring the counselors began perhaps their biggest job, scheduling classes. With the number of students coming to BHS each year, overcrowding and the lack of classrooms was always a problem. This year, however, scheduling classes was somewhat easier because of the addition of the new wing. In addition to locating classrooms, the guidance department also played a big part in helping juniors and seniors plan for college or vocational schools.

Applications for most colleges were provided in the guidance office as well as scholarship and financial aid information. Counselors also prepared SAT workshops for students to help improve their SAT scores. Last fall the guidance department started a program for juniors which proved to be successful. In this program, students were asked questions about themselves and a computer analyzed the data to provide possible careers for the students. When asked if career decision-making helped with his future planning, junior John Fierek said, "Yes, it has helped me to make better choices for my career." From counseling students to helping plan careers the guidance department was an essential part of BHS.

The Jobs And Times, The Look Of Relief When Completed

BHS has become more computerized every year: two new classes were added in the Business Department just this year. The first one, Business Computer Applications, was an introductory class which taught students the functions of word/data processing equipment. Computer components and capabilities, flow charting, and programming languages were all parts of this course's curriculum. The other new class was Computerized Accounting, a one semester course designed to apply accounting knowledge to computers. The students learned how to enter accounting data, store the data electronically, summarize, journalize, and make formal reports on the computer.

According to Mrs. Moneymaker, "The students will be equipped with the knowledge they need to go out into the work world of computers." Typing took on a new name and a new role this year. Keyboarding helped to familiarize students with the keyboard thus helping them add input to computers. Along with the new, however, the Business Department still had popular classes such as accounting, shorthand, and business law. Office machines and office procedures once again gave students a chance to understand how a business office was run. The business lab also continued its tradition of having student assistants who helped type and grade papers for any teacher who requested. This department continued to grow along with the school and the community.

Take A Look At The Junior Class Officers

Each year the Junior Class officers have had many events and problems to tend to. The junior year was especially busy this year for the class officers. Besides the normal activities like building the homecoming float, the officers were in charge of the magazine sales to pay for the Prom. According to President, Bryan Feldman, "The Junior Class has really come together this year in getting involved. We saw a lot of people come to float building and the organization for fund raisers and Junior-Senior Prom are coming along fine." The other officers for the Junior Class were Jeff Bennett, Vice President; Michelle Gipson, Secretary; and Michelle Woods, Treasurer. The Junior Class officers were extremely involved in class council. They found time for many extra-curricular activities such as golf, basketball, brain game, spell bowl, tennis, and after school jobs.

Focus On The Junior Class

School spirit is what built the Juniors float this year. Stapp Enterprises donated the building in which the float was constructed. Several hours of thought and ingenuity went into designing a float to meet the specifications of this year's theme of the Constitution. Julie Herndon's reply when asked about participation of the class and what could be done for next year was, "I feel there was a lot of participation at the float building. Some stayed on Thursday to 2:00 a.m. to finish the float. Too bad we did not win; next year we will win." Positive attitudes and hard work could not prevent the damage done by the wind which caused the juniors to come in fourth place in the float competition.

The guys are not the only ones who enjoy a rousing game of football. Many girls take part in the annual Powder Puff game each year at BHS. Although the male cheerleaders were not allowed to participate this year, the spirits of all four teams ran high. When junior Jodi Bullock was asked why she participated, she said, "I think that powder puff is good because it gives the girls a chance to play football and have some fun; it also brings about a lot of student participation and spirit." The juniors and seniors held each other scoreless, but the combined score of the senior-freshman team could not pull out a win for them this year. The final score was 14-7.

These were just a few of the classes that the English Department had to offer students this year to help broaden their knowledge about the English language. One of the most advanced classes at BHS was W-131. According to Mrs. Richmond, "They (students) gain experience in writing papers that are typical of those they will be assigned in college." She also added, "They earn college credit at I.U. for Freshman Comp. W-131 and high school credit for Honor Advanced Comp. at the same time." Some of the classes were more difficult than others; but in the end, no matter which English classes students took, learning how to speak and write correctly was rewarding to all.

Building a better tomorrow

Music, art, and industrial arts courses were all included in the creative arts department. These courses helped students develop skills in areas such as mechanics, engineering, and drawing. The industrial arts section offered classes in drafting, house wiring, and electricity. These classes required students to complete various projects relating to the class throughout the year. Woods teacher, Dave Perkins said, "Projects range from hand-crafted wooden logos to family room entertainment centers." Those interested in artistic classes had the option of taking courses of varying levels from basic art and ceramics to printmaking and sculpture. Home economic classes helped girls as well as boys learn how to cook, sew, and do other activities performed in the household. The creative arts classes helped students develop their skills and widen their horizons.

Learning about our world

Nothing's Free. What were the six steps of Kohlberg's theory? What were the qualifications of becoming a state Senator? These were just a few things that students needed to know in their social studies classes this year. Some classes that were not required like psychology, sociology, world history, and world geography gave students a chance to learn about behavior, society, cultural conflicts, and geographical locations. U.S. History, a required class for juniors, taught students about the development of the United States and the responsibility of being a U.S. citizen. All seniors were required to take one semester of both economics and government. Government helped students learn about the three branches of government and how they are run. Economics helped students better understand how the economy works. There were two types of economic classes at BHS: the regular economics course and an applied class. When Mr. Clark was asked how the two classes differed, he said, "The materials covered are the same, but in the applied course I spend only three days covering materials. Two days are used to apply the principles taught in a company setting and a consultant ties the principles taught into a business setting in today's economy. So the applied economics is a more intense and highly concentrated course while the economics course is less intense and I spend more time covering materials and principles." Each applied class, sponsored by Junior Achievement, made up a company name and produced and marketed a product. The social studies department played a vital role in preparing BHS students for life after high school.

Erin Pattison, class secretary, commented that the class's main goals for this year were

"to raise money for class projects, improve class spirit, be more involved in class activities, and to be the best class to graduate from Brownsburg." In their spare time, the class officers participated in school sports and clubs. BLAST THE CONTINENTALS was the theme of the Sophomore float for Homecoming 1987. Many hours of hard work went into designing a cannon that smoked and a bulldog whose arm moved. The smoke was produced by a fire extinguisher, and the bulldog's arm was controlled by a person inside the bulldog. Although there were problems with running out of glue and staples and poms falling off the float, the sophomores took second place in the annual float competition. Mrs. Benita Phillips, sophomore class sponsor, donated the use of her garage for the float construction. Susie Watkins thought, "Everything went O.K., but it would've been better if there were more people to help with the float." Other than that she added, "We did pretty good."

Acid, stone, volcano, blast-ed, ice. What did these have in common? They were all a type of wash for denims that set the trend this year at BHS. Each brand had its own description such as the Levi's 501 White Wash Denims, but the look was basically the same. An uneven wash of blue made the jeans appear streaked and faded. Sophomore Christie Yoder gave her reason for buying the jeans. "They go with about everything. They are unique and different." Matching jean jackets, shoes, shirts, and purses were hot items also this year. The colors blue and black were later joined by many colors like pink and purple and did go with basically everything one wanted to wear.

Improving mathematic skills and abilities

Addition. Subtraction. Multiplication. Division. For students who were interested in math, BHS had several classes for them to choose from. Classes like general math and introductory algebra were ideal for students who had difficulty in math. Students who planned on going on to more advanced classes could have taken Algebra 1 or geometry. Students who did well in Algebra 1 or geometry had an opportunity to take Algebra 2 or enriched geometry. Trigonometry/analytical geometry and college algebra were for more advanced students. Trigonometry/analytical geometry involved the study of the six basic trig. ratios, using tables, calculators and solving trig. equations all in the first semester. The second semester was related to the theory and development of trigonometry. College algebra reviewed Algebra 2 and trigonometry and covered topics in calculus. Mr. Schermer had this to say, "College algebra is a course following Algebra 3 and 4, in which students can reinforce and expand on their algebra skills. This course is also a prerequisite for the study of calculus." The BHS math department was an important part of students' education to help them in the future.

Hands on experiments

Test tubes, beakers, graduated cylinders, thermometers, and chemicals. These were just a few instruments students who took science courses had the privilege of using. Classes ranged from basic fundamentals to advanced concepts and theories. Basic Biology and Physical Science were offered for students who had difficulty in science. Although only one or two years of science were required, many BHS students chose to finish three or four courses. Each class had its unique labs that made it fun. The biology students looked forward to dissecting pigs and frogs, while chemistry students experimented with wire and burning splints. Chemistry II was considered one of the most difficult of the science courses offered. Students in this class had the chance to perform many experiments including a continuing lab second semester. The physics students were assigned a different project each six weeks which included mousetrap cars, toothpick oil derricks, and boats. When asked what the most enjoyable part of physics was senior John Daily said, "The innumerable toys Mr. McColgin produces make learning truly enjoyable." Students were exposed to countless demonstrations throughout the year including shooting marbles at a falling can and a bowling ball pendulum. The science department once again upheld its reputation as having challenging courses in several fields.

Expanding knowledge of foreign lands

Bonjour! Hola! D'accord! Salve! These were just a few words that were heard in the foreign language classes throughout the year. Many students chose to take a foreign language class. These students chose from French, Spanish, Latin, and German. Out of the four languages, Spanish and French seemed to be the most popular. Some students continued to take a foreign language for two, three, four, and even five years. Senior Tracey Ramsey said, "In French 1 and 2 there were about twenty-five in my class. In my French 4 class we have only six people. It makes it nice because we get a lot of individual help. We also read French stories and study French culture whereas in French 1 and 2 we mostly studied grammar." Foreign language students got a taste of other cultures at the dessert festival. The students made food from their culture and everyone had a chance to taste it. Foreign language classes did not only teach students how to speak another language but how other people in other countries live.

Put Your Dreams Into Focus

Hard work and determination. These words were the core of the Freshmen Class this year. Although entering a new school and being a freshmen was hard, with the help of the freshmen Class Officers and sponsor Sean Griffin, the freshmen had their year filled with excitement. The determination and endurance of these officers encouraged the class to participate in school activities. Tatia Neese said, "The freshmen class is raising spirit by supporting each other in athletic and academic events. We are getting involved by selling things to make our Junior-Senior Prom the best. We will have two fund raisers. One of them we will have the item there already, and the other one the students will order from us." By getting involved now, their Junior-Senior Prom will be a success. The officers, President Chip Powers, vice-president Tatia Neese, Secretary Jill Emmert, and Treasurer Holly Herron developed leadership skills this year by being actively involved and responsible. Although the officers were kept busy with student council, they still found time for other activities such as volleyball and cross country.

Freshman Spirit Coming Into View

Fun, friends, and hard work — the three main ingredients for making the freshmen float. This year the freshmen worked under the supervision of their class sponsor Sean Griffin and produced a float with the theme "We Have Not Yet Begun to Fight." Although they were plagued by running out of glue and green paper, they placed third in the float competition. Deciding on a theme, where to put letters, what ideas and how to construct them were some of the thoughts going through the freshmen's minds. They built the float at Tatia Neese's house near the Brownsburg Golf course. Time ran short and they did not have a chance to construct any special effects. The freshmen learned they could have fun while they worked and make friendships that would last forever. Holly Herron stated, "For the first year to build a float my class participated "great," we all had fun, everybody helped out, and was willing!"

Take A Look At Our Class Rings

May I see your class ring? This seemed to be a popular question among this year's freshmen. Many were planning for the big day that they ordered their ring. Big decisions went into choosing the class ring that was just right for each individual student — choosing which interest panel (sports, clubs, band), the color of the stone or a diamond top, a design beneath the stone, engraving on the inside, the rainbow effect under the stone, or name (first or full), and the biggest decision of all, the style. Natalie Marjan-cik stated she chose her ring because it "was unique and had a lot of different options." Herff Jones sent representatives to talk to the freshmen and sophomores and to take orders. Many chose to go to the local jewelers, such as Nelson's Jewelers and Goodman's. Nelson's had approximately 41 styles from the most popular companies: Jostens, R. Johns, and Art Carved. There were three types of metal available: a non-precious in white or gold, 10 Karat Gold, or 14 Karat Gold. Prices ranged from $54.95 to $250 for girls, and $54.95 to $379.50 for guys, the latter prices being 14 Karat gold. There was one important point to keep in mind — each company ran sales several times throughout the year which really saved the students money.

Staying physically and mentally fit

Jumping jacks, touch-football, and gymnastics. These are just a few of the activities underclass students were involved in each day. As a required course, physical education helped teach hand-eye coordination, stamina, and other athletic skills. The students not only learned important rules of many sports, but they also were able to perfect skills in sports such as tennis, basketball, and volleyball by doing different drills, taking tests over rules and regulations, and actually playing the games. In addition to regular gym, students were required to complete six weeks of swimming each semester. They were placed in one of three levels according to their performance during a swim test. Swimming teacher Mrs. Horn said level A was the weakest for students who had a "fear of water or deep end and only knew 1 or 2 strokes." Level B was for students who were "average and efficient in strokes on both stomach and back but lacked endurance or technique." C was for the "best (swimmers), swim team, intermediate and swimmer level." The swimmers were taught "competitive, recreational, lifesaving, and survival swimming strokes, safety skills, snorkeling, disrobing, life jackets." For sophomores, health replaced physical education as a requirement for graduation. Each student in this one-semester course learned all about the human body and several of its functions. They learned, in detail, the parts of the heart, brain, and muscles in the body. Students of any grade level had the opportunity to choose a study hall for many reasons. Some signed up for it to ease the load of college prep courses or to finish homework because they had part time jobs after school, while others just needed a class to fill their schedules. The resource classes were offered in order to fulfill the needs of students who had learning disabilities. These classes all helped students at BHS to become well-rounded people and taught lessons that would be important later in life.

Behind the scenes

Cooking, wiping tables, doing dishes, sweeping floors, cleaning classrooms. These were some of the things that the support personnel did everyday all year long. The cafeteria workers worked hard preparing food, serving it and cleaning up after the lunch periods were over. If students were not interested in the lunch, they could have gone to the snack bar where tenderloins, nachos, and several varieties of Little Debbie's were available. The custodians and janitors were kept busy sweeping floors, cleaning deskstops, washing chalk boards and much more. The cafeteria workers gave students hot, nutritious lunches while the custodians and janitors kept the school environment safe and clean. The support personnel proved to be a very important asset to BHS.

Giving a helping hand

Gradings papers, running off copies, typing, and going on field trips. These things were what the parent volunteers did with their spare time throughout the year. Parents of BHS students who had some free time came to school to help the teachers out. Mrs. Bloomer, English teacher, said, "The parent volunteers grade papers, do bulletin boards, work on the computer, and many other jobs. We'd be lost without them in the English department." This special group of parents devoted endless hours to help make our school better and less chaotic. They were also helpful when they volunteered to chaperone dances and field trips. Several of the parents volunteered to help out with the annual lock-in which was held in February. They sold tickets, served refreshments, checked students in at the door, and supervised. Without the aid of parents, teachers would have lost valuable time in the classroom. Teachers also had more time after school to be involved with sports, clubs, and other activities thanks to the lighter workload that was made possible by parent volunteers.

PLAIN AND FANCY

NOVEMBER 13 + 14 7:30 p.m.
B.H.S. MEMORIAL Auditorium

A New Yorker in an Amish town? Why would a smooth city slicker like Dan King and his companion Ruth Winters want to visit a plain, simple, old-fashioned Amish town called Bird-in-Hand? To sell a farm, of course, and maybe to cause conflict? The problems began when a barn was burned down, an Amish man was shunned, an engagement was broken, and an Amish man got drunk. To top it all off, an Amish girl fell in love with the fancy New Yorker! What could be crazier than that? Another engagement perhaps! Even though there were many conflicts in Bird-in-Hand, all problems were resolved and each character found happiness in the end.

Pleasing to the eyes, pleasing to the ears

Marching band, concert band, jazz band, pep band, pit orchestra, Solo and Ensemble Contest, overnight trips, marching contests, concerts, parades, private lessons, guard, and winter guard. Enough to keep anyone busy for a lifetime! The past year the band and guard marched not only at District and Regionals, but also at Plainfield and Norwell, Indiana. This last contest was part of an overnight trip where the band placed second. Senior Brian Gibson said about the trip to Norwell, "I learned how the band and guard was a family who cares and has to work together. We learned that we can do almost anything when we worked together." The band also received a first division at Regionals, but contests were not everything. The band also played at football games, basketball games, and marched in parades.

Along with the band, winter guard members performed at basketball games. This year's theme was "Dreams". It was about a girl who had a series of dreams which began with a nightmare where hands popped out of a bed. After a while it developed into a conflict with knights that were similar to the Knights of the Round Table in King Arthur's Court with good vs. evil. As it came to a close, several pretty maids of fortune appeared in the fantasy. For the first time several members of the guard helped to write the show.

As the year went on members of the band were involved in various activities and competitions. Many were involved in the pit orchestra for the fall musical, Solo and Ensemble Contest, concerts, jazz contests and a new jazz band concert called Search for the Stars '88. This was a talent show with different types of talent varying from vocal solos to instrumental solos to ensembles. Besides school activities, some of the members of the band helped by working at Raceway Park to raise money for the band. With all of these activities the band had an exciting and eventful year.

Glitter and glitz

A busy life! Being a member of a choir this past year was hectic! The choirs, consisting of Choralaires, Concert Choir, Sunshine Singers, Show Choir, and Madrigals, practiced long hours to perform for the Fall, Christmas, and Spring Concerts. Besides concerts all the choirs performed at many contests. Show Choir hosted its annual Spring Spectacular in May. According to Senior Jeff Salmon, "This year's show choir is loaded with talent, which will probably make this year's Spec. better than ever. I really enjoy choreographing for the group. Nothing is more rewarding than taking someone who's never danced before and instilling that confidence in them that it takes to be a performer. All the work of designing choreography and teaching it seems menial when you hear that quarterback with two left feet shout from the back row 'I got it! I finally got it!'" In addition to the regular choirs, Madrigals, with evening rehearsals, performed for concerts, contests and their annual dinner. Various members of the choir program lent their talents by acting, singing, and dancing in the fall musical. Whether members were involved in one or more choirs or perhaps other activities which required singers, they experienced a successful, busy year.

REVEILLE

Leading the paper through another busy year, editor-in-chief Jenny Hadley had many big responsibilities. She was in charge of laying out the front page and any other news pages, as well as editing, writing, ordering supplies, leading brainstorming and just making certain the paper ran smoothly. Managing editor Kim Ross added a new twist to the Reveille by writing her own revue column called "As I Like It". In this column she wrote reviews on things such as television programs, movies, books, records, and restaurants. When asked about why she decided to write the column, Kim said, "I thought the paper needed more of a casual feel to it and columns are usually the best way to get people to just sit down, relax and have fun reading the paper. I also think that writing reviews is my strongest area of writing and I enjoy doing the research for my stories." The Reveille came out weekly and had special issues for Halloween, Christmas, Thanksgiving, Valentine's Day, and sport sectionals. The students enjoyed reading the letters to the editor, student spotlights, athletes of the issue, and newlines along with the news of the week. Sports editor Steve Gray also added his own new column called "Shades of Gray". In this column he wrote about current issues in sports such as the bus ride to and from games. Also in the section "Fitness Hints" he gave advice on how to be safe when playing sports. No matter what the story was, the Reveille was always there to cover it. The whole staff worked hard to keep the student body informed.

The Look We Took That Made This Book

The creativity in drawing layouts, a keen eye for taking pictures, and long hours of putting pages together were all activities done by 1987-88 Tempo staff. Goals were set by staff members for their specific section. When asked what her goals for her section were, senior Diana Wootan answered, "I have worked hard to make my section, the opening section, as interesting as possible. I have tried to use exciting pictures and enjoyable copy to make my pages entertaining to read." Work began early for the Tempo staff. With ads and boosters to be sold, they worked hard over the summer. Some attended the yearbook workshop at Hanover College. There they learned new designs and techniques for a more advanced and enjoyable book. The days went by fast; and before they knew it, the first deadline was up. With every following deadline, the book became more complete. The staff came together as one and worked toward the best book. Take a look at what we have done.

The knowledge that it took

Have you ever discovered you had knowledge in a certain subject, but never knew how to use it? The academic clubs of BHS, such as the brain game, spell bowl, or speech team, just might have been the answer. All of these teams provided academic competition in current events, spelling, and speeches. The brain game, led by Mr. Corn and Mrs. Williams, took much preparation before competing. Because the brain game team had so many interested, the top four people had to be determined by testing. In the end, Clint Blanck, John Daily, Steve Herbst, and Gibby Moutaw competed against Pike at Channel Thirteen. Although the team lost by a very slim margin, they were pleased with their efforts. Early in the year the spell bowl team competed at Plainfield and placed second. They then advanced to the Regionals, but the ten-person team could not raise their scores for a victory. Some spell bowl members found competing to be very nerve racking. When asked what it was like in competition, senior Erika Marjancik said, "You're nervous because everyone is watching you to see if the score will change." State qualifiers of last year's speech team began preparing early for their speech competitions. With the help of new advisor Mrs. Armstrong, they prepared to win sectionals and place high in state again.

Organizations bringing students together

The joining of others to help community members was the general makeup of DECA, Student Council, Key Club, NHS, and SADD. They contributed to help make Brownsburg a better place to live. DECA — Distributive Education Clubs of America — has livened up school spirit by their dances and also by the candybars they sold in their store. Junior Betsy Marker stated, "I like the convenience of having candy sold at the DECA Depot because I usually do not have time for lunch." The Student Council worked towards a better year by sponsoring dances, by coordinating a very successful homecoming and by creating school spirit and pride. National Honor Society with new sponsors helped to establish an honor society at the junior high. SADD — Students Against Drunk Driving — gave the student body an opportunity to express themselves about driving drunk. All in all, these clubs contributed to the everyday pace at BHS. Take a look around at what the clubs have done for our school and town.

The distant look to an ancient land

The Latin Club or JCL (Junior Classical League) had many activities throughout the year, some locally and others on State and National levels. BHS hosted Presidents Day on November 14 about which junior Sara Ashby (local vice-president) stated, "It was interesting and enjoyable." They held activities within the gym to get acquainted with people in other schools in JCL. Club members attending a chariot race at the Ben Hur Festival in Crawfordsville ran into bad luck. Not only did it rain all day, but the chariot tipped over throwing rider Paula Prestridge, freshman, into the street. On December 15, club officers met with Governor Orr as he signed a proclamation declaring the last week in January Latin Week throughout the state. Latin Club also lent its services to the needy or not so fortunate. Each Christmas they adopted a family and collected goods to help the family. Several club members each Wednesday bowled with Special Olympians. When asked how this affected her life, senior Elisa Thompson stated, "It made me more aware of just how lucky I am". JCL was a club that offered something for everyone.

Adding support behind the scenes

Plain and Fancy were the three words that stuck out most in Thespians' minds this year. Because Plain and Fancy was chosen as the fall musical, it needed much attention. Many Thespians spent hours rehearsing lines and songs, learning dances, perfecting the sound, adjusting lights, and building sets. The week before the performance some Thespians stayed after school until nine and ten o'clock to prepare for a perfect show. In the end, the performance went very well. Senior Tonya Fields commented on the musical by saying, "I thought the cast and crew did a great job on Plain and Fancy. The way everyone worked together was very special." The Wrestlettes also had a busy year. With the help of new sponsor Mrs. Christy the Wrestlettes spent much time preparing for each match. Their biggest event however was the Holiday Tourney. Many Wrestlettes arrived at eight o'clock on Saturday morning to get ready for the tourney. Some hung posters while others kept score and cheered the team to victory.

Learning about religion through youth groups

Ice skating at the coliseum, having all-night lock-ins at the church, going to church camps, planning Christmas programs, participating in the church choirs, helping at retirement homes, and studying the Bible are just a few activities that youth groups participate in each year. Although most religious beliefs are the same as the early days, methods of worship and Bible study have undergone changes. Teenagers especially have found that learning about God can be both rewarding and fun. Many BHS students have found a second home at churches in the area. When asked what she liked most about her church, senior Cindy Thompson said, "I like Sunday school class because it's more of a discussion and we interpret things of the Bible to things of today." Although religion cannot be offered at public schools, organizations like Campus Life brought students together to learn about God. Every Tuesday night at Kendra Krohne's house, Campus Life got together to talk about current topics concerning religion and life. Other groups such as Job's Daughters and DeMolay stressed not only religion but also patriotism and service. All in all youth groups were great opportunities for students to meet new people and study the Bible.

Junior Miss

The beautiful look on the glorious night was not so easily achieved. Practice, practice and more practice was the basic schedule for the Junior Miss competition. The girls prepared for the pageant in physical fitness, poise and appearance, and talent. Throughout the evening of November 22 they sang, danced, and performed a physical fitness routine as a group. As the suspense was getting thick in the air, the judges finally announced the winners. Tonya Fields received Poise and Appearance; Kendra Krohne was the winner of Youth Fitness; Spirit of Junior Miss went to Jodie Wagley; Creative and Performing Arts went to Laura Bellville. And then the moment all waited for. 2nd Runner-up was Erika Marjancik; 1st Runner-up was Holly Hassfurder; and the title of Brownsburg Junior Miss belonged to Laura Bellville. When asked how she felt when crowned, she stated, "My initial reaction was the normal one — shock. I couldn't believe they said my name. My next thoughts, however, were directed toward the impromptu speech I was about to give." The night was over, but for Laura the journey to Frankfort was just beginning.

Reflections

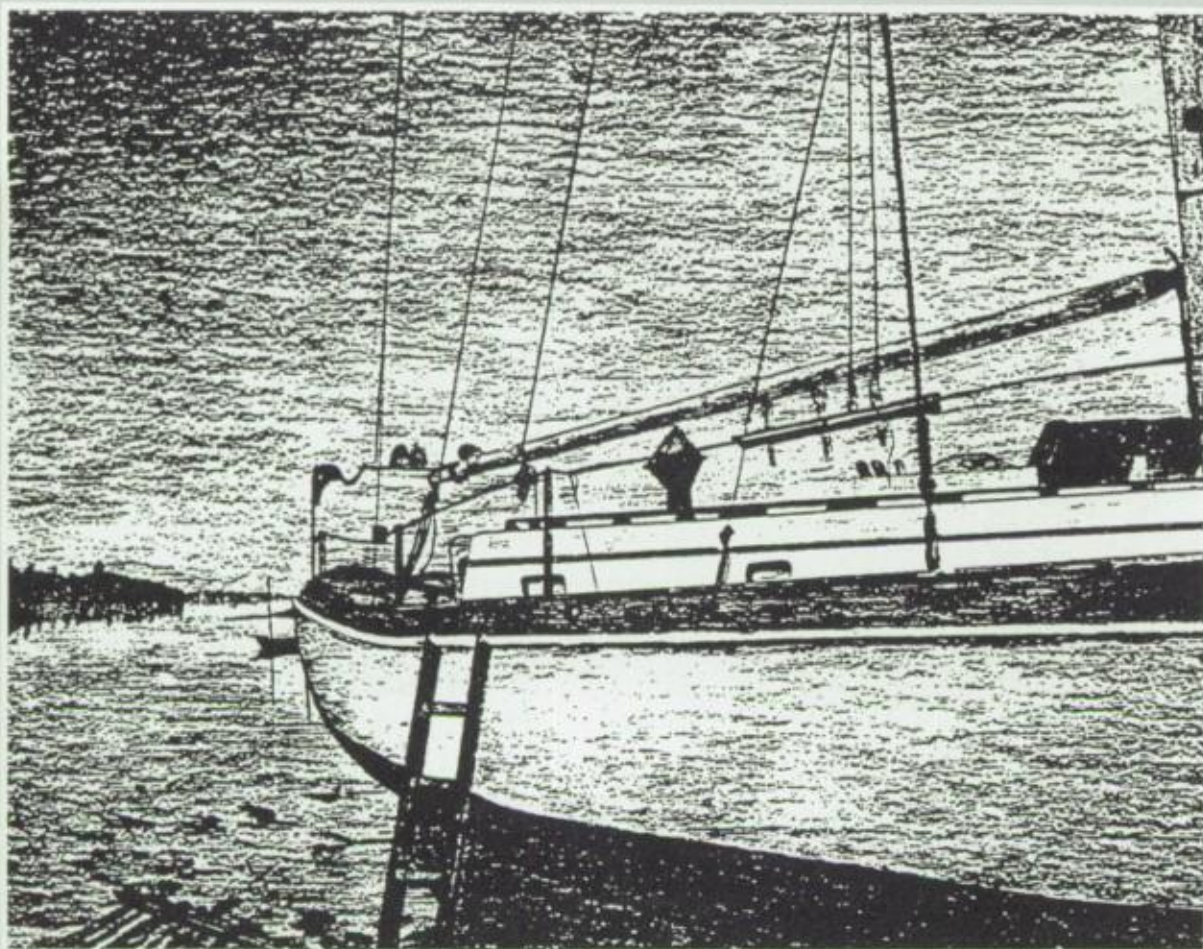

— Kelly Keith

I look to see your face everywhere I set out to go But when I cannot find you anywhere
 My emotions of loneliness begin to flow.
 To no end they begin to clutter my heart and mind until I stumble on one chilling and terrifying thought you've got her, you see and I realize that I'm not your kind I see you two together
 every single day
 Standing by each other's side, laughing, smiling, caring and you are trying to love her in every way
 Now I get it, not I understand,
 I've finally come to my senses!
 you two will always be together as one forever and I'll still be left here standing in my wishes.

THE DANCE OF LOVE

Nerves came over them
as if they had butterflies inside they worked and practiced for hours on end.

In the wings of wood and curtains of black velvet dancers get into place
as the curtain slides

For some it will be a new beginning and some a last show
they show their grace and beauty
as they do the dance of love

Some in light pink tutus and some in sheer tights that clench their bodies
Like two lovers holding tight

The music starts as it blares
From the piano aside the stage
they show their grace and beauty
as they do the dance of love.

VISIONS ON AN APRIL DAY

The water calm and blissful like an eagle soaring high above.
A seagull goes in search of food
a gift, a token of love.
And the boat upon the water is a voyager from afar,
As he wanders through the silent ocean,
his only company, the stars.
As the world begins to go to sleep
her eyes swell up and begin to weep.
The dancing raindrops on the windowsill murmurs a sweet lullabye.
As the world goes to sleep,
she slips away within a sigh.

Death is near
 The tears fall heavy
 There is fear in his eyes
 Yet he is calm
 We lie
 But for his and our own good.
 He is going soon
 Will he return?
 It is not for us to say
 Please God, keep him safe.

NO MORE HELLO'S

Never again will I smile
 I was happy for a short while she brought me life when she was here
 Never once did I shed a tear
 I always had a twinkle in my eye always had the shoulder if she needed to cry
 And then one day she disappeared
 It was the thing I always had feared
 Now it is me which needs the shoulder
 Wishing I could have helped her
 The sparkle in my eyes has gone away
 I don't know what else to say
 I have cried, and will continue to cry
 As I will always wonder why she had to die.

Both types are pretty all the same

As we walk through the forest,
We see many beautiful trees.
There are hundreds of them all around us.
Some trees grow big and strong,
While others remain small.
Some live long, healthy lives;
While others live short ones.
Their lives may have been shortened
By diseases or other things, such as The evil of man.
Or it may just have been an accident.
The trees represent life & death.

Dealing with it, but we have To accept it.

CHANGING TIMES

My eyes awake as I look at the sky,
 I look at the trees and wonder why,
 The skies are so bright, as the leaves will fall,
 I focus on my life, as I see it all,
 The seasons begin to change, and
 As for my life it all seems strange,
 One day life is great, I am rolling around,
 The next day life has change, back on the ground,
 My life goes up like a big airplane,
 But it can come back down, like a drop of rain,
 The leaf in my life seems as one,
 The light that guides us comes from the sun.

Be . . .

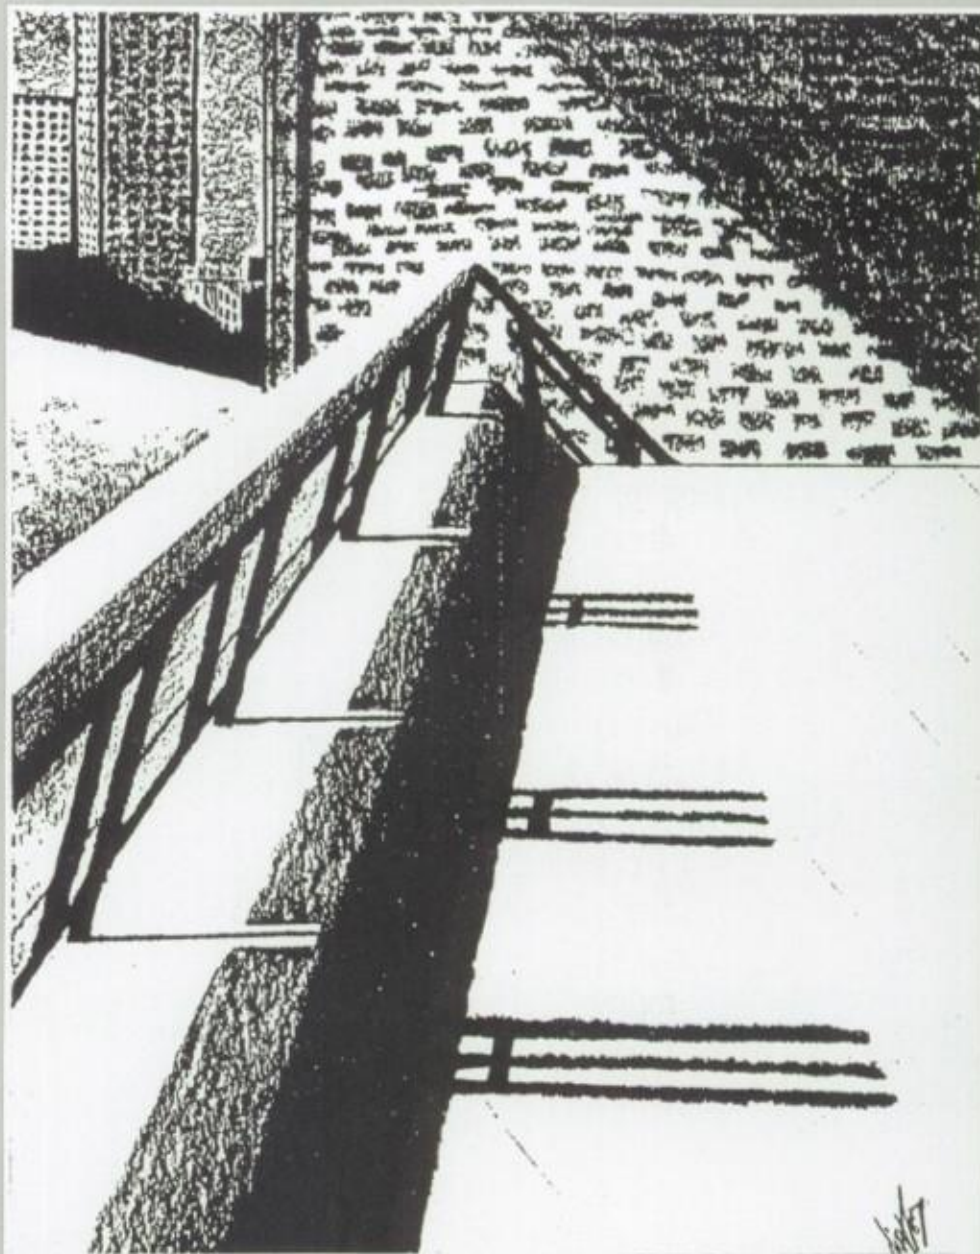

Be kind to your fellow man —
help him when you can,
Be courteous to a stranger —

Be supportive of your friends —

Be funny when the time calls — make them all heartily laugh.

Be gentle to those in trouble —
as their tears fall on your chest, Be strong in weary times — help others to do their best.

Be sure to meticulously remember — all that has been done for you,
Be sure to return the favors —
your friends will remain true.

FOREVER YOU WILL STAY

I think sometimes, of how it used to be when we were together
When you would walk along the beach with me and I thought our love would last forever

I guess I was so very wrong as time has changed us both But for those nights in your arms I long dreaming of when you were here

It hurts to think of you holding another girl
it was for us the smiles glowed
And you still are my world
even though I had to let you go

All I can do is think of the day when you'll return and you'll have the right thing to day say You'll tell me a lesson has been learned forever you will stay.

IN MEMORY OF YOU

Everywhere I look traces of you
From the precious rose that lie
On the window sill.
To the smell of your sweet skin
That fills my mind.
Your soft caress and your beautiful Eyes.
Your lips so soft gently touching Mine.
And soon the tear drops fall from
My eyes.
The memory of you has now
Been shattered by the sharp
Cutting edge of reality.
The gray everyday lies before Me now and I alone must face
It without you by my side
To make me feel safe and Secure. Now I am alone and Afraid.
So I lie down for my last and Final time.
I give my last breath and I give my life.
All for the deadly memory of you and I.

Gray skies hang above his head and fallout covers the grass.
A tear falls from his cheek as loneliness swallows him.
His mind drifts back four months before and to when the alert was sounded
He took supplies and fled underground.
Knowing damage would be apparent but figuring on survivors and now discovering only himself in a world of damnation
He climbed down from the pedestal and walked to a stream of pollution.
In the water an image was cast, one of which was himself and yet too
an accomplice.
Angered, he cupped
his hands and drank, joining the other

CONFUSION

The checkers on the floor
create the ultimate illusion
The stairway leads upward to the door standing tall creating a feeling of confusion.

The clutter within the stairs makes on wonder with fright
How can one make a home
if the steps are all so old and the stairs creak in the night?

AUTUMN

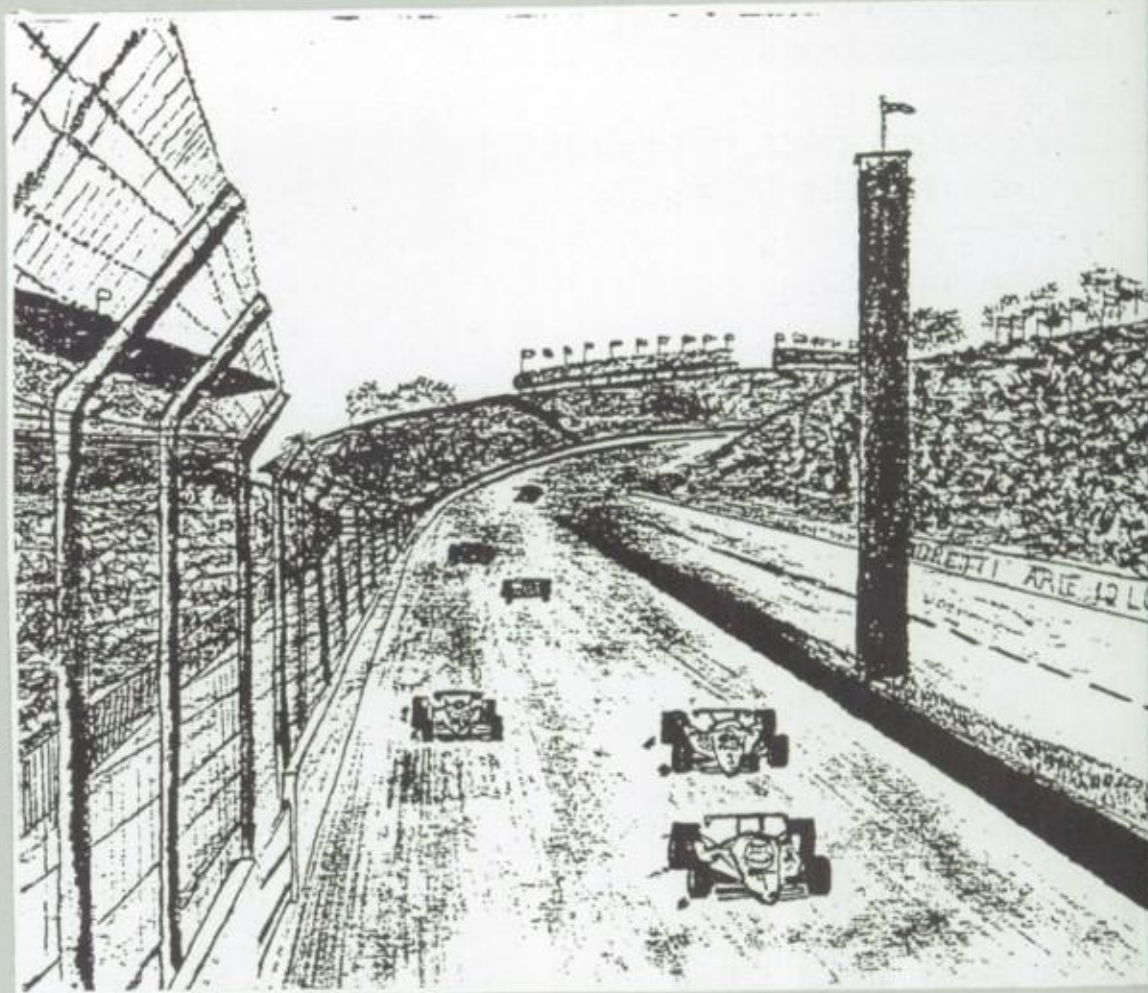

Here I sit so lonely and tired.
I see leaves on the street that look like fire.

So many trees so big and hollow.
So many leaves that blow past,
I want to follow.

So many leaves, brown, orange and red.
I caught one and named him
Ted.

I felt like making a big pile of leaves.
I wanted it to go up to my knees.
I made a pile, jumped in,
and disappeared forever.

Billions upon Billions of white persons floating aimlessly toward their destiny. Like us many in number living a life full of trials, perils and tribulations. Our lesson involves individuals sometimes combining but never alike. We often reflect each other but are never alike. Often we are let loose on our own hoping to achieve a greater status. In relation the snowflake is freely floating across an alien abyss to which it can stick and be seen or return to it's original state and become a lesser one at that. We can become a variable in society. We are nothing more to a changing system than a number or code, all different. This idea of numrication is contrary to that infinite number of snowflakes which could not be counted, just labeled as infinite. Two snowflakes join to become a greater mass. We join to form a greater level of importance above which we had before accomplished. This level can never be constant. Some persons reach a continuing level, building up to form a higher status and greater ideas. Flakes may combine to form a greater, impassable fortress which we can build or destroy or move out of the way. Reaching a level of higher status, or importance can be varied by another natural Power. Depending upon climate, region, latitude and longitude these free flakes can flourish or be absolutely nill. Depending upon our own variables can live a beautiful life full of learning and important values or we can be eaten by society or be washed and melted away.

CHANGING OF LEAVES

Leaves are beautiful,
leaves change colors and fall off trees,
leaves die.
People are beautiful,
people get old,
people die.
Leaves changing colors, falling off trees,
and dying resembles the life cycle
of humans;
in spring, leaves are new such as people are born,
in summer, leaves are at their peak,
such as people are becoming adults, in fall, leaves begin to change color, as people are beginning to age, in the winter leaves fall off trees, such as people die.
All living things die, but new living things are always created.

— Anessa Hendry

These dreams of happiness come and go like spring and fall.

And since dreams are supposed to be a reflection of reality . . .

Could that mean that there is a possibility of happiness for me out there too?

— Kim Duncan

Laying in bed I heard the dripping of the faucet
And how I ever wanted it to stop
Oh how I didn't want to get out of bed
And rustle through the junk on the floor
Just to reach the squeaky door.

INNOCENT STARE

The rabbit so soft, so warm, so free.
Protecting her babies from the hard cold breeze.
Even in the snow she goes out of her warm homemade shelter.
Goes out and finds some food for her children.
Although she knows it is time for the cruel season for Rabbits
She doesn't give up for her bunnies eating habits.
As she sees the hunters go past looking for the first chance to blast.
As she hops to her home a hunter spots her as she moans.
She looks him in the eyes
as he starts to sigh.
He lowers his gun to the proof she has won.
The hunter walks away slowly with the feeling of love and care for her new family to share.
For the innocent Rabbit's stare.

THE FIGHT FOR LIFE

A tall dark shadow cutting off the light
Holding out a hand, reaching for your life.
Closer it comes, moving slowly, steadily,
You're just out of reach, safe for now.
The hand clenches into a fist, angered,
Not yet satisfied, not yet giving up.

POWERS OF A WINTER NIGHT

A winter night the coldest it can
Has powers to create far above mans.
As the sky slowly darkens it's powers kick in
The powers of darkness have things to begin.
The night sky is darker than an old witches cat
As the air begins to chill with a cold nipping knack.
The ground begins to harden harder than stone
As the wind begins to cut the warmth right to the bone.
Snow begins to fall light as a through a sieve
As the stars start to twinkle as it's time to begin.
The powers of creation take a long time to be
They only work in the night time so no one can see.
with the sky black as tar and the air cold as ice
The ground starts to harden so this art can suffice.
The wind like a chisel chip flakes from the way
So the snow can be sprinkled and not fly away.
This work's done by starlight that twinkles with delight
For the sun is far away and they couldn't think twice.
The night grows darker as the sky darkens still Till the air grows colder and freezes the hills.
The ground grows harder till its solid as stone
The wind blows still sharper till its cut through the bone.
Then the sun rises slowly and morning begins
As the light hits the beauty that the night has slept in.

REMEMBERING

Silence, solemn meditation
Coming closer to your soul,
Opening the doors of your mind
That you closed when you were young.

Being alone, thinking quietly
Of what you could have been,
Wondering about friends
And what happened to them.

Close your eyes, picture the future
Things you strive to be.
Reaching your goals,
Only to lose them with age.

Cry, release your feelings,
Let the tears fall to a slow resolution.
Forgetting why you were crying,
Becoming happy again.

Recalling memories past
Crying as you remember the bad,
Laughing as you remember the good,
Coming back to reality.

Remember now, the good, the bad
For soon you shall forget, Remembering only part Of the things you should regret.

— Amanda Heath

I search for you in crowds,
But my eyes never see.
You're not there anymore
I feel I'm falling.
Falling in the way your eyes see me.
I want to climb but,
You push me back down sinking sinking Waiting for you to pull me top.

Coffins lay side by side
Waiting for the next to die
One is filled, Now is gone.
Loved ones cry sorrows song.
Here lies Jane Six feet down
Buried in her bridal gown
Killed by drunks, such a shame
She won't play love's new game.
Tom, her lover, weeps with woe.
Asking why he was so slow
"Should have stopped them" is his cry
But it's too late as other's die
Coffins lay near one another
Tom is gone to join his lover.

Newness — Coach and players

Upperclass! That was the key for this year's boy's tennis team. The team had six seniors that played varsity this year. Many players played different positions due to the competition. Captain and leader, senior Chris Hill, said, "Being captain of the tennis team was important to me although it is not looked upon as much as other sports." "Newness" describes the season. Senior Matt Billingsley stepped on to varsity for his first time out for tennis. Mike Atkinson returned after a leave of absence of last year. Another new element to the team was Coach Terry Day. He had never coached tennis but stepped in with confidence. Coach Day enforced new drills and kept the team in good conditioning form. The team saw far more running during practice than they did last year, but they found it helpful during matches. Although the team did not do well in two early season tournaments, they placed second in sectionals behind Crawfordsville. This was the high point for the team this year. Award winners were Chris Hill, Most Valuable Player; Matt Billingsley, Most Improved; and Brian Gibson, Mental Attitude.

Perfection — Becoming the very best

Putt, Fore, Chip, Drive! These were the words on the greens as the girls' golf team practiced at the Brownsburg Golf Course. It wasn't miniature golf these girls were after; it was the real thing. The team had an extremely successful year. Led by Caryn Atkinson, the girls made their way to Conference where they took first place. They then advanced to sectionals where they ranked second. With their style intact the team headed on to regionals, for the first time, where they placed sixth. This year the lady linksters took on a foreign flare with the addition of foreign exchange student Marlies vanBlanken, the Dutch sister of team member Michelle Woods. Marlies said, "My year on the golf team has been fun. I had never played before and this was a good experience to learn it." When asked about his first year as the girls' golf coach, Mr. Jannusch said it was, "my best experience in seventeen years of education." The thirteen - member team was said to have done much better in their second season. One reason given by Bethjean Crumly was, "The golf team has improved alot because we had a bigger turn out for the team this year so we had more competition against our teammates."

Aggressive — Ready to defend

Determination, skill, and leadership were the qualities of the '87 soccer team. During the conditioning and training sessions, the determination of the team set the pace for the season. By improving their skills on the field, the team developed into a competitive threat. The leadership of the eight seniors, Jerry Harlan, Jud Hobson, Doug Kelly, Larry Pennington, Jake Ritter, Jason Sparks, Dusty Swartz, and foreign exchange student Eric Norrman, helped to lead the team to a sectional victory over Logansport. Jerry Harlan was recognized as the most valuable player and also the defensive player of the team. The team was led in scoring by junior Steve Ernest. Senior Dusty Swartz gave his opinion of the year, "We didn't play to our potential, or win as many games as we wanted, but it did feel good to win, especially in sectionals, thanks to the support of the fans."

Endurance — overcoming the obstacles

Sickness and injury. These were the problems that plagued the girls' cross country team in the '87 season. Even with all the problems, five of the lady Bulldogs managed to race faster than in any other season. The team worked hard to acquire their third straight Hendricks County championship. The team consisted of one senior, two juniors, four sophomores and one freshman. These eight runners also finished fourth in the C-SAC meet. The team improved from last year with the help of more runners and different training. "The cross country team only lost one senior from last year's team, so the team was mainly the same, and all we could do was improve on last year's performances. This year the team was fortunate enough to keep injuries to a minimum and keep all the runners racing during the season. As in the past, we could count on Renee Ruiz running in the front of the pack, but this year we had Amy Bush, Stephanie Jones, Cricket Runyon, and myself all running close and competitively together. This year's coach added something to our training program — hill sprints at Eagle Creek, and aqua running in the pool before school. Both methods helped the team improve their form and technique. We surprised a few teams this year with our improvement, but I think as we improve more over the years we will surprise even some state ranked teams," stated senior Lucy Baumgartner. With only one runner not returning in the 1988 season, next year's team should be very successful. "The lady bulldogs had great individual performances but were hurt by injury and sickness throughout the season hindering the teams success. Winning their third straight county title and finishing fourth in the C-SAC meet showed the team's potential when healthy," said Coach Reusser about the girls' performance.

Determination — Running to win

Continually pushing to better times, the boys' cross country team showed much improvement over that of last year. Although the team competed against seventeen state ranked teams, they kept a positive attitude as the competition got stiffer. Andy Wing, the team captain, kept the motivation and spirit alive during the season by continually encouraging the runners to run their hardest during practice. The team found unexpected but much appreciated help from freshman Chip Powers, the team's leading runner, and also other freshmen. Another plus was Takakiyo Nakaya, foreign exchange student from Japan. The high point of the year was advancing through sectionals to regionals, where they placed ninth. Encouraged by the team's showing, coach Tim Reusser believed the team would improve even more by next season. "The future looks bright for next year's squad if our newly found work ethics continues during the off season."

Champs — The best of the county

Hendricks County Champs! The title the girls' volleyball team worked hard to achieve in 1987. The girls put in many long hours of practice, working on serves, sets, and spikes. Their practice paid off for they received the title for the first time. Coach Clifford gave one reason for the win: "The confidence and skill level was the highest it has been. Instead of going into a game hoping we might win, we went in games knowing if we played up to our capabilities we would win. This year our 18-8 record was the best in Brownsburg school history. Also, the first time we won the county tourney." The 1987 team worked together to improve their game. Jenny Hadley's opinion of the team was, "I think we're both physically and mentally much stronger and our experience is showing. A lot of us have played together for several years, and that's a big advantage. The bench is much stronger, too. There's always someone to fill in and do a good job if a starter has an off game." The girls ended their season with eighteen wins and only eight losses; they were also named Westfield Tourney Champs.

Competition — tougher with new conference

Up and down — that was how the season went for the Dogs this year. Sometimes they played like a state contender, but other times the picture looked totally different. The team saw some changes this year. Last year quarterback and senior Jeff Rose commented on his move into the backfield. "At first it was difficult because I was used to playing only quarterback, that was really the only offensive position that I have played. I enjoyed playing in the backfield and I think Tony did a good job as quarterback." The defense this year had to rebuild from the loss of many seniors. Although Scott Montoya, who is now playing for Indiana University, was not there, he was replaced by senior Jeff Mallory, voted the team's best defensive lineman. Team captain Gibby Moutaw added his help as Best Defensive Back. Danny Godan was selected to the all-state team with his fine receptions and sharp offensive skills. Gibby Moutaw and Steve Nitka were selected to the Academic All-State team. Other awards for the Dogs were Gibby Moutaw, Bulldog Award; Steve Nitka, Offensive Lineman; Jeff Rose, Offensive Back.

Working together — the key to success

Hard work — this was the key for the girls basketball team during the 1987-88 season. A combination of sprints, drills and free-throw practice helped the girls better the scores this year. The nine lady bulldogs on the varsity team worked well as a team to overpower many opponents. The team consisted of five seniors who led the team. Lori Hix, Angie Arndt, Dawn Watkins, Sally Price, and Lucinda Click helped to make the team a success. The outlook for next year's team is quite clear. Coach Cooper gave his opinion on next year's squad "Girls' Basketball for 1988-89 shows great promise.

Though the completion of the '87-88 season brings an end to the high school careers of five great seniors who led the team to the Plainfield Sectional Championship, there is a great deal of talent returning. Starters Caryn Atkinson and Michelle Woods will return and form a solid foundation on which next years' team can build. Fans will find next year's team to be an exciting and fun to watch squad. They will use tough, changing defenses and a fast paced offense to frustrate opponents." Hopefully next year's squad will have as successful a year as this year's team had.

County champs — thrill of the season

Swimmers, take your mark! The girls' 1987 swim team had an exceptional season despite the fact that the team was composed mostly of freshmen. The girls won ten out of fifteen of their regular dual meets and captured fourth place at C-SAC. The big surprise was their win at county by one point, after the girls thought they had lost by one point before the final scores were tabulated. Freshman diver Paula Prestridge voiced the feelings for the whole team, "I was really proud and shocked. We all did more than our share of supporting and that was GREAT! We need to stay this way no matter what! And now we know that we are THE BEST!" Junior Christy Albert, co-captain, again led the team throughout the season. She set a new county record in the 200 yard individual medley. She also set new records in the 500 Free, 200 Free, and 100 Free. Kari Crawford set a new county record in diving. In addition to outstanding individual times, Jennifer Sheets, Julie Harris, and Laura Bellville teamed with Albert to set a new county record in the 400 Free Relay.

Misfortune — altering potential

Illness and injuries plagued the wrestlers this year. Many senior wrestlers saw their season altered with injuries and sickness. Although the team was not at its full potential, they still had to wrestle against fifteen of the top twenty teams. The team was also busy on Saturday wrestling in tournaments. This meant that the wrestlers had to keep in shape. They did this by having practices in the morning before school and also after school. This took a lot of dedication from wrestlers including senior Steve Herbst who said, "I love wrestling because you can't blame anyone else when you lose. It is just you against the opponent. That is what makes me work hard in practice. If I am in better shape and smarter, I feel very confident." Steve was the only member to make it out of Regionals and advance to Semi-State. The team's most successful meet was placing third at county.

Accomplishment — placing second in state

I feel that we have an excellent squad this year with the most potential our school's cheerleaders have ever had." That was what senior and captain Jennifer Lyon said, and it was evident in the squad's performance this year. The cheerleaders placed first in Marion County, first in regional competition, and second in state. During the summer the squad went to camp at St. Mary's College in Terre Haute. Working hard on routines and fundamentals, they made it to the Award of Excellence finals and placed second runner-up. Also at the camp, three girls were chosen from the squad to compete in the All-American cheerleading final: seniors Christy Beeler, Christina Hawtin, and Jennifer Lyon. This honor was given to only twelve cheerleaders in the camp. Out of these twelve, Christy Beeler received the title of National All-American Cheerleader, and as a result, the opportunity to cheer at the Aloha Bowl.

Breaking records — a year long challenge

Record breaking year — this sums up the season for the boys' swim team. County and pool records were broken throughout the year. Diver Chris Unruh placed first in the state after a full year of new records. Andy Luckey broke the county record in backstroke for a first place victory. In addition to these two, seniors Dan Cull, Chris Finchum, and Brian Gibson combined for individual and relay best times all through the season and a trip to the state finals. What was the key to breaking the records?

Hard work and practice. The team worked hard in practices before and after school to improve times. Dedicated team members arose early to come to practice at 5:30. Senior Brian Gibson remarked, "Going to morning practice and then to school is not hard for me. For some I'm sure it is, but since I've done it for four years, I'm use to it. The only hard part is getting out of bed to go to morning practice. The water wakes you up in a hurry."

Surprising — joining the "sweet sixteen"

A strong junior class was the key for the boys basketball team this year. The squad had seven seniors that contributed to the success of the team. Another plus was new coach Steve Brunes, from East Central. Coach Brunes came to Brownsburg with an impressive record and a lot of tournament championships. His presence was evident to this year's success. The team surprised many people with their style of play and aggressiveness. Teamwork also played an important part. According to Bobby Archer, "There were no outstanding players on the team. We knew that we all had to work as a team and play as a team." The inside game was helped mid-way through the season when Eric Hylton was moved up to the varsity. Winning sectionals was more than anyone expected, but who could ever have predicted a regional victory?! The fans who traveled to Frankfort were treated to the best the Bulldogs had to offer. Making it to the elite "sweet sixteen" certainly surpassed the wildest dreams of team and fans alike.

Noble Roman's[®] PIZZA

The greatest pizza a-Round.

Noble Roman's Hand-Tossed Round pizza is part of an Italian/American tradition that is the best of both continents. We make our own dough fresh daily and shape it for the oven by hand-tossing it, an art that is centuries old. Then we add generous portions of tangy sauce, specially-blended cheese, premium meats and fresh vegetables from all over America's vast farmlands. It's always made from scratch with fresh, wholesome ingredients, and baked to perfection in the Noble Roman's tradition. The Hand-Tossed Round pizza: greatest pizza you ever tasted.

With the arrival of the new principal Mr. James Land, new innovations appeared on the BHS scene. In an effort to encourage academic achievement in the different departments in school, the Student of the Month program was started. Every month each department nominated an outstanding student who during the month had improved his grade, who had done better than usual, or that month. After being selected, the outstanding student was photographed by Mr. Wilbur Tague for display on the Wall of Fame. The student also had his name announced over the announcements and was allowed to draw for a prize which could range from two sandwiches from McDonald's to fifty dollars. Junior Patsy Plott was the Home-Ec student of the month in October and drew for her prize with Mr. Jensen.

On October 16, Distributive Education Clubs of America put on their first big event of the year — the Fifties Dance. To celebrate the Fifties theme, DECA sponsored Fifties Day at school and at the football game that night against Lawrence North where people dressed in fifties outfits. Following the game the dance was held in the College Avenue gym. During the evening there was a lip-sync contest, a hoola-hoop contest, and a bubble gum blowing contest to add to the fun. Senior Bobby Archer also volunteered to get his hair cut in a crew cut if DECA sold 200 advanced sale tickets. All proceeds from the evening were donated by DECA to the Paul Acton Scholarship Fund. When asked how he thought everything went Mr. Steve Bennett replied, "After all the hard work, it was pleasing to see that it was such a great success."

To most people the intricate parts of the Indiana State government are a mystery, but to seniors Dan Cull and Erika Marjancik government became less of a mystery. This summer at Indiana State University they each attended Boys' and Girls' State where they spent a week learning about and practicing the art of politics. The weeks of Boys' and Girls' States provided the Brownsburg delegates with many new experiences. When they first arrived, they were separated from anyone from Brownsburg and forced to learn how to coexist with a new roommate for a week. The rest of the week they had to get up and go to flag raising every morning at seven o'clock, attend model political party assemblies, and campaign for an office, since everyone was required to run for one. All in all, it was a very interesting experience.

Seniors Diana Wootan and Cindy Thompson and juniors Betsy Marker and Jennifer West spent June 14th through the 17th at Hanover College for Jostens Yearbook Workshop. During their stay at Hanover, the girls attended several meetings on such things as designing covers and theme development.

They attended labs to design the pages of their yearbook while learning the fundamentals of layout design. The week was not all work, however. There was recreation time in the pool, on the tennis courts, or walking along the Ohio River. On the final day, Diana Wootan won the overall copywriting award while Betsy Marker was awarded the overall design award. "The week was a great learning experience and really helped me to get a head start on my ad designs for this year's book. The workshop is where our book really gets started," said junior Jennifer West.

Seniors Jake Ritter and Gibby Moutaw were two of the Brownsburg High School students who attended Boys' State. They along with Steve Herbst, Bobby Archer, and Dan Cull spent the week at Indiana State University learning about the Indiana State Government. The boys were expected to march from place to place about the campus. This included assemblies, flag raisings, and lunch. The boys were divided into separate cities and countries. As stated by Dan Cull, "Boy's State gave me a clearer understanding and respect for the election process and government officials." Each of the students attending the convention were expected to run for a government office. Dan Cull ran for sheriff but was defeated; Bobby Archer ran for County Coroner and won. Each of the other Brownsburg students were also required to run for some sort of government office.

The entire student body was encouraged to dig through their closets and come up with the nerdiest outfit they could find. The students wore a variety of things, such as horn-rimmed glasses, polyester pants and an assortment of plaid colored, mis-matched clothing. "It is the first day my mom let me dress myself," was Senior Bobby Archer's comment. Bobby also felt it was the best day the school had for Homecoming week where the students really were enthusiastic about participating. Other days included in Homecoming week were Cowboys and Indians Day, Class Spirit Day, Twins Day and the all original Purple and White Day.

The annual Halloween dress up day was a way the Seniors could show their true selves and bring out hidden personalities. There were a multitude of different costumes the Seniors displayed. Seniors Chad Baber and Molly Buerger displayed the latest fashions in vagabond costumes. A shopping cart full of all the daily essentials was what was used to top off their costumes. Costumes also took a more religious aspect with Seniors A.J. Ploughe and Erika Marjancik dressing like nuns, and Seniors Jeff Salmon and Faith Nanny dressing like Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker. And on a totally different scope, Seniors Bobby Archer and Steve Herbst dressed as flashers. "It was fun because we had a chance to show our true personalities and it helped to bring the Senior Class together at least for a day," was Senior Julie Houston's comment on the day.

On October 10, 1987, Senior Paul Thomas was elected president of the Gourmet Club at Ben Davis High School. This club ran a restaurant at Ben Davis where customers were offered what was made that day. This restaurant had three stations which offered salads, entrees such as Porterhouse steaks and spaghetti and meatballs, and the bake shop which specialized in such desserts as Black Forest Cake and Napoleons, which were puffed pastry filled with Bavarian creme. The Gourmet Club also took field trips to restaurants every month in order to make the club more educational. They also held fund raisers because the club tried to give each student going on the field trips $3 to $4 towards the expenses of the meal and more if their treasury would allow. This was a very active club and Paul was excited about his position as president.

Witches and goblins came from all over the Indianapolis area. Konovsek's Haunted Barn was not the only frightening spot BHS students attended during Halloween. Screams could also be heard from the Haunted Train at Union Station, Scream in the Dark and The Children's Museum Haunted House. The newest attraction last year was Nightmare On Edgewood near Greenwood. Sophomore Rob Griner's comment was, "It was different." Halloween has always been a time for practical jokes and pranks, and in Brownsburg, jokes and pranks go hand-in-hand. Sophomore Elizabeth Cull said, "We bombarded our neighbor's house with water and shaving cream balloons." People were hiding in trees and on rooftops fully armed, but in the end the Cull's won the war.

Home at last! After a grueling twenty hour bus ride from Stetson University in Florida, sophomore Elizabeth Cull was glad to be home. This past summer some members of the BHS Latin Club joined 1500 other high school students from around the nation at Stetson University for the National Junior Classical League Convention. During the week long convention, Brownsburg students competed in various academic tests and several participated on the Indiana basketball team which placed first at the convention. Social events were not ignored either; there was a luau, a Miami Vice Dance, a talent show featuring convention delegates and a Roman Banquet to keep kids busy. The convention gave BHS students a chance not only to compete in a variety of areas but also to meet many kids from around the nation.

Who's the one behind the mirror? It's sophomore Robin Virgil taking a picture of her first place and grand champion ribbons she earned in 4-H. Virgil stated, "I was just experimenting when I took this picture. I earned the ribbons on my mirror for my color slides. I got a first and champion at the local fair and a first at state." Virgil also said, "I would not mind pursuing a career in photography." Photography was just one example of 4-H involvement. Many BHS students participated on the local level in areas ranging from cooking and dress-making to raising and showing livestock. In order to go on to the state competition a person had to be named grand champion on the local level.

McFARLING FOODS

As the world around us moved toward more advanced technology so did the BHS computer system. According to Mrs. Sharon Bengé, the system had been updated twice since it had been installed. By using the system Mrs. Bengé was able to keep accurate student records. For example, if a student's address changed, it only took a few seconds to type the new information into the computer. The computer also did all the scheduling of classes. After Mrs. Bengé put the master schedule into the computer and then all the student schedules, her job was to resolve any conflicts that might have arisen. Mrs. Bengé was also responsible for writing up reports on grades. Once those were done, she made out the report cards and ran them. The computer made this process not only faster but also more efficient.

Jail? What was the respectable band director at Brownsburg High School doing in jail? It was all part of raising money for the American Cancer Society. Band Director Joe Vrabec said, "I called people for pledges and my goal was $200.00. Everyone from the high school was involved in the jail-a-thon, also. History and economics teacher David Robinson said, "Mindy Tasich, one of my students from last year, knew about the jail-a-thon and sent out a 'warrant' on me for singing in class. They picked me up during my summer economics class." The Cancer Society used the donations for research on cancer. Although the jail-a-thon brought in a large sum of money, more money is still needed in the fight against this disease.

Super scientists, senior Erika Marjancik and sophomore Matt Norman took a break with Miss Vivian Hale to attend the Indiana Junior Science Academy at Indiana State University. The day which began at 8:00 a.m. started with a featured speaker from I.S.U. who presented a lecture on Genetic Engineering. He not only discussed the procedures involved but he also discussed the uses for it which ranged from the deletion of genetic diseases to increased food supplies. Following his lecture, the delegates listened to several other delegates present scientific papers on such things as improved artificial limbs and underwater breathing apparatuses. Matt and Erika were also given the unique opportunity to be a part of a panel discussion on the pros and cons of Genetic Engineering. All in all, it was a very informative day.

The search for that elusive ten, the cheers of the audience and the nod of approval from a pleased coach are all vital aspects of diving. With graceful agility and taut muscles both mentally and physically, BHS divers developed intricate combinations of tucks, twists, and turns for their dives. Senior Chris Unruh went through the motions of his dives before he even stepped up onto the board. This diver broke several diving records during the year including the BHS pool and the county records. The highlight of his high school career was capturing the Indiana state high school diving championship. Tim Higbie also finished well at county, placing fourth. On the girl's team Cari Crawford also did extremely well throughout the season.

Who was that masked bandit? It was senior exchange student Marlies VanBlanken from Holland. Marlies was busily involved in all of Latin Club's Junior Classical League events with her American sister, junior Michelle Woods. There were many things available for the students to do. They could involve themselves in sports, clubs, band, choir, or a multitude of other things. They also had a chance to meet with other exchange students from other schools. During the summer the exchange student and his or her American brother or sister could take a trip to Washington, D.C. Heather Knowlson, a senior who hosted an exchange student from Australia last year commented, "I thought it was neat for all the foreign exchange students to be able to see and compare our capital to theirs. I believe it was a good experience for Kelly."

It looks good enough to eat. The gingerbread houses were not the only good things being cooked up in the Home Ec. Department, however. On December 14, 15, 16, and 17 the Home Ec. Department had its Second Annual Bake-off. Students enrolled in foods classes were eligible to enter in one of the following categories: cakes, pies, cookies, refrigerator desserts, and gingerbread houses. Before the contest each contestant had to submit a copy of his or her recipe. The first place winners in each category were as follows: cakes — Joy Smoot and LouAnne Selbee, pies — David Dygert, cookies — Shannon Rice and Brandy Jones, refrigerator desserts — Tracy Davis and JoAnn Konovsek, and gingerbread houses — Lisa Hicks.

Sophomore Holly Tudor enjoyed designing different fashions. She someday hoped to become a fashion designer. Since she is no longer a cheerleader, she devoted her sporting time to playing racquetball and running. Holly was only a sophomore and had plenty of time to fill up her schedule with school activities. Other sophomore class members also had plenty to keep them busy. Sophomore Jason Plunkett said, "keeping busy is no problem between running, my friends, my girlfriend, and other hobbies such as music and art which tie into future goals I've set." Sophomore Jeni Floyd said that she tried to promote world peace, while Erin Pattison would rather "go to the movies, do things with my friends, help the sophomore class council, listen to music, and play basketball."

HOLLETT AND HARMON DRUG STORE

New makeup, gas for the car, new clothes, that fantastic car you had your eye on, or college. All these things cost money, and in order to get them many B.H.S. teens got part-time jobs. Junior Angela Foor worked at K-mart as a salesperson while senior Amy Bridges along with sophomores Carrie Bridges and Paije Palmer worked at Hollett and Harmon Drug Store. Every Saturday they worked at the soda fountain and ran the cash register. Still others relied on that all important source of income: the parents. Senior Holly Hassfurther said that her parents flatly refused to let her have a job because they felt that since she would only be in high school one time in her life she should enjoy it.

Hairspray, mousse, gel, spikes, perms, braids, and bows. What do all these things have in common? They, more than ever, this past year helped B.H.S. students express their own unique styles as well as personalities. Junior Renee Ruiz favored wearing large bows, records, or vintage hats to express her unique style while senior Trevor Patton sported spiked hair as his fashion statement.

Many students also chose to color their hair to add that extra pizzazz and once again the color was up to the individual. While most girls chose just to lighten their locks, a few felt that vibrant color was what their hair needed, and they chose colors of varying shades of blue and red. Many of the guys also decided to lighten their hair for a unique look. The past year definitely hit new highs in personal expression.

The 1987 Tempo was produced and printed by the Printing and Publishing Division of Josten's located in Clarksville, Tennessee. The Plant Consultant was Shelia Maddox and the Josten's Sales Representative was Dick Maurer. The 1150 copies of the 22 page book were printed in News Gothic Condensed in 10 and 8 points, respectively. All headlines were printed in Jefferson style. The Craftline embossed custom cover was designed by Charlotte McQuay on silver metallic material #500 with blue hot foil stamps on the front and spine and a Redwood #1194 grain. The custom color tip-on photo on the cover was taken by Sharon Gibson.

Youth Groups 126-127

After taking a good look at the past year, we agreed that it was a success. BHS went through many changes — all for the better. The addition of a new wing made the school a more comfortable place to be and the addition of school personnel increased efficiency, both which helped the education process.

The many school activities at BHS kept us busy. Athletics, academics, and clubs filled almost all of our days and seemed to cause the school year to hurry by. Before we knew it, spring break, prom, and graduation were upon us. All in all, the year was filled with lots of fun and good memories which will always be held close to the heart.
